State budget completed without new fees or tax increases

Legislature sticks to its commitment to have government live within its means while increasing educational opportunities

LANSING – The state Senate has completed its work on the fiscal year 2005-06 budget, approving spending plans that are balanced without the need for increased fees and taxes.

“I am happy to report to Michigan citizens that I believe this budget, even though not perfect, is a responsible budget that keeps spending within our means, allows for growth in some areas and makes responsible reductions in other areas,” said Sen. Ron Jelinek, R-Three Oaks. “And despite Michigan’s sluggish economy, we maintained our commitment to education by increasing funding for School Aid. Education is the key to the future and we have shown that education is a top priority by providing students with the funds necessary to be successful.”

Throughout the budget process, Senate Republicans focused on the priorities set forth by their constituents to ensure Michigan remains an economically viable state that is a great place to live, work and raise a family.

One of Jelinek’s major priorities was increasing educational opportunities. He announced the Senate did just that with the following actions:

- Increased per-pupil funding for K-12 students by $175
- Increased funding for special education by $75 million to account for increased program costs.
- Increased funding for school lunch programs by $18.5 million to account for increased costs in providing school lunches.
- Increased funding for the 33 Math and Science Centers by $875,000 to account for increased costs. Located throughout Michigan, each center provides leadership and resources to the local K-12 community in areas of mathematics, science and technology.

“We made a commitment to taxpayers that we would force government to live within its means, just as Michigan’s families have to,” said Senate Majority Leader Ken Sikkema, R-Wyoming. “The first question we answered was how much money we had available. Then we had to determine Michigan’s priorities and focus our limited resources without turning to taxpayers for more money.”

Among other positive highlights of next year’s budget, Senate Republicans:

- Provided a funding floor of $3,650 per student for public universities.
- Restored funding for scholarships, including the Michigan Tuition Grants and King-Chavez-Parks programs.
- Protected the Michigan Merit Award program from the governor’s proposed changes.
- Restored funding to the Agriculture Experiment Station and Cooperative Extension Service.
- Restored $1.3 million for fuel inspections and the hiring of additional inspectors to ensure customers are receiving the proper quantity and quality of fuel they paid for.
- Restored funding for the Michigan Youth Correctional Facility in Baldwin and saving the state money by renegotiating the contract.
- Restored funding for hearing and vision screening services for Medicaid recipients.
  - Required Medicaid recipients to sign a personal health responsibility agreement.
  - Established co-pays to ensure people are taking responsibility for their healthcare decisions.
  - Established a bipartisan joint committee to identify ways to reduce Medicaid costs.
  - Required lights on all construction barrels to ensure the safety of motorists.
  - Required the coordination of routes served by suburban and urban transit authorities to prevent wasteful spending of limited transportation dollars.
  - Placed restrictions on state employees’ out-of-state travel.
  - Required the Department of Management and Budget to develop a plan for more effective assignment and authorized use of state vehicles.

The budgets are expected to be signed by the governor prior to the start of the new fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1.
